Child Care Options for Farming Families

It’s not always easy for farming families with young children to access the child care they need to keep their children safe, meet the child’s developmental needs and continue to run the farm. This is especially the case when both parents work or there is a single parent.

This resource describes the main types of child care available in Australia and links farm parents to child care resources and contacts. Use the summary table below to identify options, read more about them on subsequent pages, then follow up on availability using the contact details on the back page.

A second fact sheet is available from Farmsafe Australia for those communities who may be interested in setting up a local child care arrangement.

Flexible long day care centres have been developed in some rural localities where the days/hours of care is determined by needs in the community. For example, child care offered on designated days of the week when families travel to a community for business or at peak seasonal times when both parents are working on the property.
ON FARM OR FARM-BASED CHILD CARE

* On-farm care can be available through child care/children's services such as a mobile service, family day care, child care centres as well as other agencies in the community.

* A carer travels to the property and looks after the children while the adults are busy with farming activities. Care is offered for children from birth to 12 years depending upon funding and carer availability.

* Child care may be full or part time ranging from several hours a day to several weeks. The care is for busy times including seasonal activities such as mustering, shearing and harvesting. Care may also be provided for special events such as field days.

* Emergency on-farm child care may also be available.

Programs are offered in the one facility or administered by the service with care offered in different venues.

* Generally, multifunctional children’s services operate in communities that may not have a population size to sustain all of these service types individually.

* In some services, other programs such as parenting and health initiatives may also be provided.

* In some rural areas, existing children's services such as a preschool, crèche or kindergarten have extended the hours of operation or integrated child care options alongside the service to offer additional services. This has required building modifications and extensions in some situations.

OCCASIONAL CHILD CARE

* Occasional child care offers care for short periods for children from birth until school age. This service type provides children with the opportunity to socialise and participate in an environment which is stimulating and friendly.

* Occasional child care centres may be located in community halls, shopping centres or specialised centres. It is a unique service model which is flexible and enables families to access child care as required.

* The hours of the service operations will depend upon funding, the locality and community need.

JOBS EDUCATION AND TRAINING PROGRAMS (JET) CRÈCHES

* These crèches have been set up in some remote areas where standard childcare may not be an option. This program targets sole parents, carers and low income or widowed people wishing to re enter the workforce.
